

Tad Williams is a New York Times and London Sunday Times bestselling author of fantasy and science fiction, with novels translated into more than twenty languages and a global readership.

He hosted a syndicated radio show for over a decade, co-created the first completely interactive television program, and is currently involved in film, television, comic books, computer games, and other multimedia projects. Tad lives with his family and many other animals in northern California.

Jacket photo by Getty/The Image Bank
Jacket design by G-Force Design
Author photo by Deborah Beale

Visit us online at dawbooks.com

Praise for the Bobby Dollar series:

“When I heard that Tad Williams was writing an urban fantasy novel, I got all tingly. Now I’ve read it, and it’s even better than I’d dared to hope. It’s snarky, fast-paced, and above all, original. You should be tingly, too.”
—Patrick Rothfuss, #1 New York Times bestselling author of The Wise Man’s Fear

“A noir fantasy series with a dark and thrilling story of Heaven and Hell battling for human souls. Exhilarating action, fascinating characters, and high stakes will leave the reader both satisfied and eager for the next installment.”
—Publishers Weekly (starred review)

“A tough, likeable hero and a multidimensional plot. . . . The author’s many fans as well as urban fantasy enthusiasts will enjoy Williams’s take on Heaven’s less desirable places as well as his wry humor and keen insights.”
—Library Journal (starred review)

“You could call this angel noir or metaphysical mystery; either way it is something very strange and deeply entertaining.”
—San Francisco Chronicle

“Williams has managed to create something really special, that manages to breathe new life into the urban fantasy genre while at the same time retaining that magic of his earlier novels. An incredible start to a promising series.”
—SF Book Review

“With silver bullets flying and smart-mouthed angel Bobby Dollar ready to kick some demon ass, this is an awesome, action-packed read.”
—Kristen Britain, New York Times bestselling author of Blackveil

“The angels aren’t exactly angelic in this wickedly good start to a new crime noir series. This one kept me up all night reading to see what twists and turns Bobby will have to navigate next.”
—Parkersburg News and Sentinel

“[Dollar’s] quest for the truth uncovers lies and deception, in heaven and hell, that propel the headlong plot towards a fascinating conclusion.”
—The Guardian

NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR
TAD WILLIAMS

Sleeping Late on Judgement Day

NEW YORK TIMES
BESTSELLING AUTHOR

U.S. $25.95
Canada $28.95

TAD WILLIAMS

Sleeping Late on Judgement Day

As usual, the angel Doloriel has a few problems.

Doloriel—or Bobby Dollar, as his friends on Earth and his even more numerous enemies call him—has already been to Hell to try to retrieve his beloved Caz from the clutches of an archdemon named Eligor. That mission failed. Now, not only does Caz (who’s actually a demon, herself, but still a nice person) remain a prisoner in the place of Eternal Punishment, but Bobby’s friends and informants are deserting him right and left and his new apartment seems to be haunted. Also, somebody high in the heavenly hierarchy wants Bobby eliminated. And we’re not talking about downsizing, we’re talking about utter destruction.

When you’re a minor angel, and pretty much everything you’ve been doing is against the rules, that’s called trouble. When you add neo-Nazis, other-dimensional monsters, and the world’s ugliest automobile into the mix, that’s even more trouble. And when you combine all that with Hell’s most powerful demons and at least one of Heaven’s most powerful angels wanting nothing more than to see you burning forever in Hell—well, that’s more than trouble. That’s called The End, and for Bobby Dollar, it’s approaching fast.

Time for Bobby to get back to work. Because it’s almost Judgement Day, and Heaven isn’t going to overthrow itself.

Sleeping Late on Judgement Day